SEPTEMBER 2026

Back to the ’70s

September often marks a return to routines, and during the 1970s, it also signaled the start of a new television season. Long before streaming and on-demand viewing, fall TV premieres were major events. Families gathered around the television to watch the first episodes of returning favorites and discover new shows that would soon become part of everyday conversation.

The 1970s are often remembered as a golden age of television sitcoms. Programs such as All in the Family, The Mary Tyler Moore Show, and Happy Days reflected changing social attitudes while providing plenty of humor. Their characters, catchphrases, and storylines became cultural touchstones, influencing entertainment for decades to come.

Music was equally influential. The decade saw the rise of disco, a dance-driven style that filled clubs and radio stations. Funk also gained widespread popularity, blending powerful rhythms, bass lines, and energetic performances. Artists experimented with new sounds, helping shape modern popular music.

One song in particular has become closely associated with September itself. In September 1978, Earth, Wind & Fire released the hit song “September.” Its upbeat rhythm and memorable chorus helped it become one of the most enduring songs of the era. Decades later, it remains a staple at celebrations, sporting events, and community gatherings.

From disco dance floors and funk concerts to sitcom premieres and bell-bottom jeans, the 1970s left a lasting mark on American culture. Every September, as television networks unveil new seasons and the familiar strains of “September” begin to play once again, echoes of that remarkable decade are never far away.
