We don't always see the dolphins swimming in the ocean, but we know they are out there. Sometimes the dolphins are jumping and playing around in the waves right in front of us, but we miss seeing them because we aren't looking for them. Sometimes we are looking in the opposite direction, and sometimes we are too busy scrolling on our phone to see the dolphin show right in front of us.

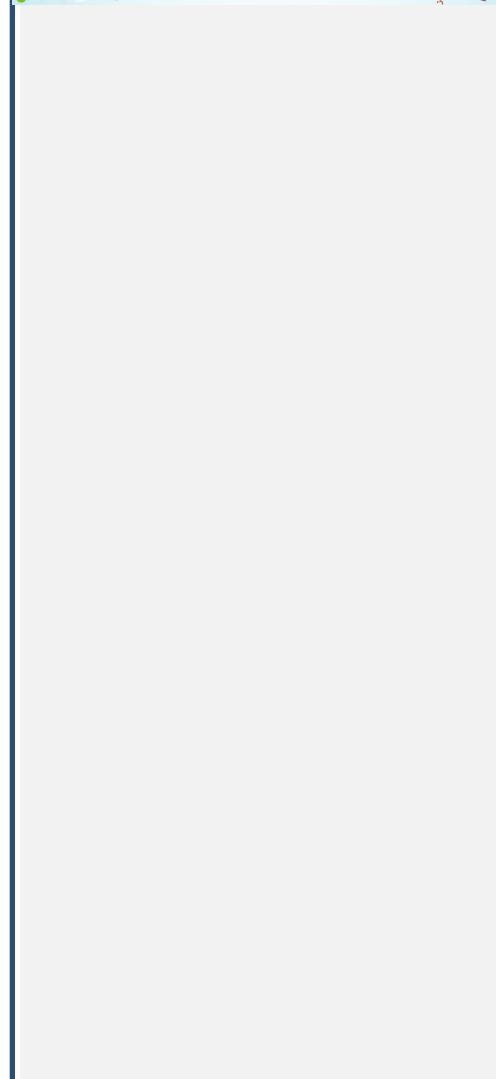

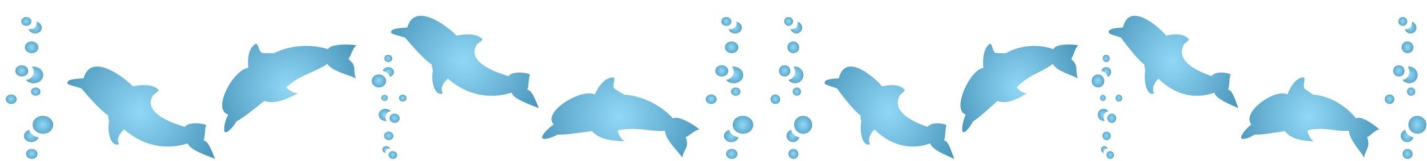

God's presence in our lives feels like that at times. Just like God, we know he is out there, but we don't always see him.

Sometimes we may be going about our day, trying to see God, but we aren't looking in the right direction. And sometimes we are too busy scrolling on our phones or carrying out our to-do lists to notice God moving right in front of us.

And sometimes, you may be looking where you last found God, but he is nowhere in sight.

But God promises to draw close to us when we draw near to him. He wants to be found, and he promises to be found when we seek him with our whole heart.

If you've been trying to see God, don't give up. Keep looking. Keep searching. And just like the dolphin fin that pops out of the water when you least expect it, you'll see God moving again in your life.

To His Father

By Robinson Jeffers

Christ was your lord and captain all your life,

He fails the world but you he did not fail,

He led you through all forms of grief and strife

Intact, a man full-armed, he let prevail

Nor outward malice nor the worse-fanged snake

That coils in one's own brain against your calm,

That great rich jewel well guarded for his sake

With coronal age and death like quieting balm.

I Father having followed other guides

And oftener to my hurt no leader at all,

Through years nailed up like dripping panther hides

For trophies on a savage temple wall

Hardly anticipate that reverend stage

Of life, the snow-wreathed honor of extreme age.
